BUSINESS

MONTREAL, TUESDAY, JANUARY 24, 1989

Gazette, Nancy Ackerman

Katie Lindeman, 5, watches a dry-ice test at Northern Telecom in Lachine.

Youngsters see how business operates

Students at LaSalle's Allion Elementary School visited Northern Telecom Canada Ltd.'s cable division in Lachine

The visit was part of an educational program called Koalaty Kid, which is designed to help make students aware of "the need for quality as a key to strengthening Canadian competitiveness."

said the American Society for Quality Control, an international professional association that sponsors the program.

The Allion school is the first one in Quebec to get the program, said Emilio Falquero, Northern Telecom's quality manager at the Lachine plant. Falquero, who also is co-ordinating the Koalaty Kid program in the province, said there are three other Canadian schools using the program as well as 18 in the U.S.

The program places a heavy emphasis on reading and, organizers say, aims to foster a strong sense of self-worth and responsibility in the students.
